

Larkfields Infant School- Careers Education Statement

At our school, we believe that careers education begins in the earliest years of learning. Through a broad and engaging curriculum, we aim to develop children's awareness of the wide range of occupations and roles that exist in the world around them. By introducing these ideas at an early stage, we help pupils build curiosity, ambition, and respect for different contributions to society.

Our curriculum is designed to expose children to different occupations in meaningful and age-appropriate ways. This includes:

- Exploring jobs through topics, stories, role-play, and visits or virtual encounters.
- Inviting visitors from a range of professions to share their experiences.
- Making links between classroom learning and real-life applications of skills.
- Using resources that reflect a diverse range of careers and backgrounds.

We are committed to actively challenging gender stereotypes and broadening pupils' aspirations. We do this by:

- Presenting positive role models that reflect diversity in gender, ethnicity, and background.
- Selecting books, media, and examples that show people of all genders working in a wide variety of roles.
- Encouraging all pupils to explore interests freely, without assumptions or limitations.
- Promoting inclusive discussion about fairness, equality, and respect.

Through these approaches, we aim to nurture open-minded, confident learners who recognise that their future choices are not limited by stereotypes. We seek to inspire every child to believe that they can aspire to any role, guided by their talents, interests, and determination.
